Are subway cars getting dirtier? Survey says yes

Schmutz. A Straphangers Campaign review found a decrease in subway car cleanliness.

New Yorkers noticing more "subway schmutz" are not imagining things.

The number of clean subway cars decreased from 52 percent in 2011 to 42 percent in 2013, according to the Straphangers Campaign's annual "schmutz" survey, which was released Thursday.

"We're looking at the grime, the spills, the food," said Jason Chin-Fatt, the campaign's field organizer. "You know, seats people avoid because of sticky spots."

The campaign said the decline represents a trend of decreasing cleanliness on subway cars. The same survey rated 56 percent of cars clean in 2008.

Chin-Fatt said a surge in ridership during the last few years could be making the subways harder to keep clean.

"When ridership goes up, there's more opportunities for people to spill coffee and food," he said.

The campaign's survey found a wide disparity among the system's 20 lines. Cars on the D line were the dirtiest, with just 17 percent clean, and L trains were the cleanest at 63 percent. Nine subway lines were found to have experienced "significant deterioration" in the last two years.

The cars were rated for cleanliness of floors and seats using the Metropolitan Transportation Authority's own guidelines.

New York City Transit spokesman Kevin Ortiz partially attributed the findings to "flawed methodology." In the MTA's own survey, 92 percent of operating subway cars surveyed were clean in the second half of 2013. The MTA reviewed more cars during twice the time period as the Straphangers Campaign survey, Ortiz said.

The MTA's fleet of roughly 6,200 subway cars are cleaned regularly at terminals, he said.

"During the course of a round trip, customers can accidentally drop drinks, come in with muddy shoes or slush and salt during a snowstorm, but that is not indicative of our car-cleaning efforts," Ortiz said.

A 2013 MTA passenger satisfaction survey found 74 percent of riders were satisfied or very satisfied with the overall cleanliness of subway cars.

Still, Chin-Fatt said questioned the transit authority's assessment.

"Who are you going to trust, New York City Transit or your own eyes?" he said.

Cops: Teaching assistant arrested for sex with student

A Queens teaching assistant was arrested at about 1 a.m. Thursday for having sex with a 14-year-old student of the Maspeth school where she worked, according to police and school officials.

Clara Somodi, 39, was charged with rape and other offenses after an investigation found she had repeated sexual encounters with a boy who attended P.S. 9, the Walter Reed School, officials said. The 10-year Department of Education veteran was suspended.

She was expected to be arraigned Thursday evening. ANNA SANDERS

De Blasio signs sick leave bill

With a few strokes of his pen, Bill de Blasio signed his first bill into law as mayor, requiring any business with five or more employees to offer workers paid sick days.

The mayor signed the legislation at the Williamsburg-based Steve's Ice Cream shop, surrounded by New Yorkers who would benefit from the law and fellow city leaders who helped usher the bill through City Hall.

De Blasio / OFFICE OF THE MAYOR

The bill's sponsor, Manhattan Councilwoman Margaret Chin, and Council Speaker Melissa Mark-Viverito were both alongside the mayor for the signing.

The bill goes into effect on April 1.

Health. Exchange nears 1 million mark

New Yorkers looking for health insurance through the state's exchange have just over a week left before the deadline.

The state has received almost 1 million applications, with around 666,000 residents already enrolled.

The New York State of Health website reported on Thursday that about 995,000 New Yorkers have submitted online applications ahead of the March 31 deadline. New Yorkers must apply before April in order to obtain health insurance through the exchange.

Teen sneaks to the top of 1 WTC: prosecutors

Best view of NYC. Teenager spent two hours on top floor of new building.

A New Jersey teen sneaked up to the top of America's tallest building on Sunday morning, officials said.

Justin Casquejo, 16, was arrested about 6 a.m. after police said he bypassed security and guards at One World Trade Center, making his way to the 104th floor.

Casquejo climbed through a 1-foot opening in a fence surrounding the building's construction site about 4:10 a.m., according to Joseph Pentangelo, a spokesman for the Port Authority Police Department.

"I found a way up through the scaffolding, climbed onto the 6th floor and took the elevator up to the 88th floor. I then took the staircase up to 104th," the teen is quoted as telling police, according to a criminal complaint.

On that floor, Pentangelo said, Casquejo eluded an "inattentive" security guard. The guard, who worked for a contractor, has been fired.

Investigators believe Casquejo spent two hours on top of the building.

When he was finally arrested about 6 a.m., a camera and his cellphone were seized, but investigators are still looking into whether Casquejo sneaked up the tower to take photographs.

Casquejo was charged with criminal trespass, a misdemeanor, as well as a trespass violation.

Con Ed gives funds to nearly 90 people affected by NYC gas explosion

Con Edison has made payments to nearly 90 survivors and other people displaced by the deadly gas explosion that leveled two apartment buildings in New York City last week to help them with living expenses, the utility company confirmed on Thursday.

Cleaning up / GETTY IMAGES

The company declined to detail the amounts given to the 87 affected people.

It said the payments, which were made a week ago, were to cover living expenses for those who lost their homes or have been forced to leave their homes.

Five women and three men were killed and dozens more were injured by the explosion in Manhattan's East Harlem neighborhood on March 12, which occurred just moments after a resident in a nearby building reported a gas leak. REUTERS

City reports small spike in cases of tuberculosis

Test. New York has one of the highest rates of tuberculosis cases in the country.

New York City saw a slight increase in the number of tuberculosis cases last year.

The city's Health Department reported the 1 percent jump in tuberculosis cases — up to 656 in 2013 compared to 651 in 2012. People infected with but not afflicted by tuberculosis rarely show symptoms, which is why the city wants more people to test for the disease.

Relatively speaking, the number isn't a big jump for the city, keeping the number of cases to about eight for every 100,000 New Yorker. Even so, the city still has one of the highest rates of tuberculosis cases in the country.

A growing diabetes epidemic and use of immune system weakening medications has lead to higher susceptibility to tuberculosis, health officials said. The cases can be addressed with testing and treatment, officials said.

"If you come from a country where TB is common and have a medical condition such as diabetes or HIV, or are on medication for inflammatory conditions, ask your provider to test you for TB," said Health Commissioner Dr. Mary Bassett in a statement.

CHESTER JESUS SORIA
@chestersoria
chester.soria@metro.us

Biggest concentrations

The highest concentrations of reported tuberculosis cases come from Sunset Park, West Queens and Flushing.

- The city revealed 84 percent of total tuberculosis cases were reported among individuals born outside the United States.
- The top five countries of origin among foreign-born persons found to have tuberculosis were China, Philippines, Bangladesh, Mexico and the Dominican Republic.

Possible debris near Australia a 'credible lead' for missing jet

Satellite image showing objects that may be possible debris of the missing plane are shown in a revised area 185 km to the southeast of the original search area. / GETTY IMAGES

Information.
Officials said an aircraft had dropped a series of marker buoys in the area.

Aircraft and ships plowed through dire weather in search of objects floating in remote seas off Australia that Malaysia's government called a "credible lead" in the trans-continental hunt for a jetliner missing for nearly two weeks.

New Zealand's air force, whose P-3K2 Orion returned from a 2 1/2-hour search mission in the Indian Ocean early on Friday, said it had found nothing that could have come from the missing plane.

"The crew never found any object of significance," Kevin Short, air vice marshal at New Zealand's Defense Forces, told Radio New Zealand.

"Visibility wasn't very good, which makes it harder to search the surface of the water," he said, adding that the plane had flown at around 1,000 feet over the sea.

The large objects which Australian officials said were spotted by satellite four days ago are the most promising find in days as searchers scour a vast area for the plane lost with 239 people on board.

A Norwegian merchant ship arrived in the area on Thursday, but officials cautioned it could take days to confirm if the objects were part of the Malaysia Airlines Boeing 777. Malaysia's government said the search would continue elsewhere despite the sighting in the southern Indian Ocean.

A search for the plane that began in the tropical waters off Malaysia's east coast has now switched to the vast, icy southern oceans between Australia, southern Africa and Antarctica.

In addition to the New Zealand craft, two Royal Australia Air Force AP-3C Orions and a U.S. Navy P-8 Poseidon were involved in Thursday's search, which was called off late in the evening and will resume on Friday.

There have been many false leads and no confirmed wreckage found from Flight MH370 since it vanished from air traffic control screens off Malaysia's east coast early on March 8, less than an hour after taking off from Kuala Lumpur for Beijing.

REUTERS

The area where the objects were spotted is around 1,500 miles southwest of Perth, Australia, roughly corresponding to the far end of a southern track that investigators calculated the aircraft could have taken after it was diverted.

The larger of the objects measured up to 79 feet long and appeared to be floating in water several thousand meters deep, Australian officials said. The second object was about 16 feet long. Arrows on the images pointed to two indistinct objects.

Obama targets Putin allies as Russia races to finish its annexation of Crimea

Moscow. Russia announces its own sanctions against senior U.S. politicians.

U.S. President Barack Obama raised the stakes in an East-West confrontation over Crimea on Thursday by targeting some of Russian President Vladimir Putin's closest longtime political and business allies with personal sanctions.

The extension of visa bans and asset freezes into Putin's inner circle came as Moscow rushed to consolidate the annexation of the Black Sea peninsula, seized from Ukraine last month, and to boost its military presence in the region.

Russian troops took over three Ukrainian warships in Crimea on Thursday, using stun grenades in one incident, a Ukrainian spokesman said. Kiev also said it had begun withdrawing its border guards, surrounded and outnumbered by Russian forces, from Crimea to the mainland.

The U.S. added 20 names to the blacklist, most of whom grew rich after being associated with Putin since the former KGB officer began his ascent to power in the mayor's office of St. Petersburg in the 1990s.

Moscow reacted by announcing its own sanctions against senior U.S. politicians in retaliation against visa bans and asset freezes imposed by Washington on its citizens, with the foreign ministry saying U.S. action would "hit the United States like a boomerang."

European Union leaders were meeting in Brussels to step up their own measures against Russia.

Officials said that while the EU would add a dozen names to its sanctions list and cancel a planned EU-Russia summit in Sochi, it would not go as far as Washington in hitting Putin's money men.

"We will be a step behind the Americans," a senior European diplomat said. REUTERS

Blacklist

The 20 names added to the U.S. blacklist included Kremlin banker Yuri Kovalchuk and his Bank Rossiya, major oil and commodities trader Gennady Timchenko and the brothers Arkady and Boris Rotenberg, linked to big contracts on gas pipelines and at the Sochi Olympics, as well as Putin's chief of staff and his deputy, the head of military intelligence and a railways chief.

Security. Gitmo board weighs detention of bin Laden bodyguard

A suspected Osama bin Laden bodyguard, who has been held at the Guantanamo Bay military prison for 12 years, faced a national security board on Thursday weighing whether he should remain in detention there.

Ali Ahmad al-Razihi, 33, is suspected of having been part of what intelligence officials call the Dirty 30 security detail around bin Laden.

Razihi's hearing before the Periodic Review Board was to re-examine whether he should continue to be held without charge at Guantanamo Bay or be transferred, possibly home to Yemen. One of the two U.S. military representatives for Razihi read a statement to the panel that said Razihi was focused on returning to Yemen, getting married and helping with the family fruit and vegetable business. Bond, James Bond. Travel the globe like 007 — for a hefty price

A couple not satisfied by merely watching James Bond on the screen, and who have $815,575 to spare, could live something resembling the life of the fabled Agent 007 on a 21-day, seven-country luxury tour.

The package comes with luxury hotels, three-star gourmet meals, private jets, sports cars, casino stops and speedboats.

VeryFirstTo.com, the luxury goods and services website that announced the tour, expects it would appeal to "a huge Bond fan" — preferably a couple, since the price is for two, according to communications manager Amar Thapen.

The tour starts off in London and will hit Monte Carlo, Venice and Istanbul before moving on to spots in India and Thailand, all of which have served as locales for Bond movies.

It winds up in Jamaica at the Goldeneye estate, now a luxury hotel, where author and former intelligence agent Ian Fleming wrote some of the novels on which the films are based. REUTERS

"Whichever couple purchases the trip will be living the Bond life for 21 exhilarating days in seven countries that have hosted many of the iconic films."

Scrap dealer finds $20 million Faberge egg

When a scrap metal dealer from the Midwest bought a golden ornament at a junk market, it never crossed his mind that he was the owner of a $20 million Faberge egg hailing from the court of imperial Russia.

In a mystery fit for the tumultuous history of Russia's elite, the 3-inch egg was spirited out of St. Petersburg after the 1917 Bolshevik Revolution and then disappeared.

An unidentified Midwest man spotted the egg while searching for scrap gold and purchased it for $14,000, hoping to make a fast buck by selling it to the melting pot, but there were no takers.

He searched the Internet and realized he might have the egg that Russian Tsar Alexander III had given his wife for Easter in 1887. REUTERS

Vatican library will digitize its archives and put them online

The Vatican library began a project Thursday to digitize thousands of historical manuscripts, dating from the origins of the church to the 20th century, and make them available online.

Working with the Japanese technology group NTT Data, the library intends to scan and digitally archive about 1.5 million pages from the library's collection of manuscripts, which comprises some 82,000 items and 41 million pages. The initial project will take four years and may be extended.

"The manuscripts that will be digitized extend from pre-Columbian America to China and Japan in the Far East, passing through all the languages and cultures that have marked the culture of Europe," said Monsignor Jean-Louis Brugues, archivist and librarian of the Holy Roman Church. REUTERS

THE NAKED NEWS

Opinion

TOM FOREMAN

TOM FOREMAN IS A POLITICAL CORRESPONDENT FOR CNN.

When I get my own TV show with no bosses involved, you can bet your smartphone I'll call it "Naked Headhunter News." I don't know what the program will be about, but I guarantee that a lot of people will take a peek based on the title alone.

I've had this idea for so long that I wonder if I should consider a copyright infringement suit over the reality show "Naked and Afraid." Probably not. The better plan would be to get in on that action and develop a series of spin-offs: "Naked and Feeling a Draft"; "Naked and Pretty Damn Proud of Myself"; "Naked, Afraid, and AMISH!" You get the picture.

The reason I mention this has nothing to do with nudity. It has to do with a new study about how we get information. ("Naked and Looking for a Newspaper"!) The Media Insight Project surveyed a bunch of folks about how much they rely on TV, radio, papers and the Internet to get news, and found many fascinating details. Among them: Only about one in three news consumers goes beyond the headlines.

I've always suspected this, but seeing it locked into numbers makes it more real ("Naked and Depressed"). I understand that we're all busy. I understand that the world is full of information sources fighting for our attention. But I also understand, from many years of covering the news, that plenty of stories defy explanation and understanding when they are reduced to a single, truncated line.

For example, back in October you could have written the headline "Obamacare Website Launches," or you could have written "Huge Problems with Obamacare." Both would have been correct — and incomplete. ("Naked and Uninformed"!)

The solution? We in the media must give you a reason to go past those headlines: important stories, honest reporting and rock solid facts. ("Naked and Old-School"!) And you? Well, you're already doing your part. After all, you read this far, and not many do.

Metro does not endorse the opinions of the author.

2 CULTURE

Reruns be damned!

Spring is here, but that doesn't necessarily mean you shouldn't stay inside and watch all of the great shows that are about to be back on TV. LISA WEIDENFELD

Returning shows you're already watching

'Game of Thrones'

HBO, returns April 6, 9 p.m.: Which beloved character will be brutally murdered by a conniving noble this year? Perhaps just a light maiming? If you've already read the books, keep it to yourself, and enjoy the return of everyone's favorite fantasy version of a Shakespearean tragedy.

'Veep'

HBO, returns April 6, 10 p.m.: Once you've finished watching the political maneuvering and betrayals on "Game of Thrones," stick around for more of the same, but funnier and with more cursing — and Julia Louis-Dreyfus.

'Mad Men'

AMC, returns April 13, 10 p.m.: The final season of "Mad Men" premieres soon, but you're only getting seven episodes before the show disappears again until — brace yourself — spring 2015 for the final 14. Comfort yourself with a martini this afternoon.

'Nurse Jackie'

Showtime, returns April 13, 9 p.m.: Remember when Merritt Wever won an Emmy for this show and her entire acceptance speech was, "Thank you so much. I gotta go. Bye"? Said so perfectly! Regardless of whatever urgent business she had at the Emmys, she found time to film the sixth season of this dark comedy.

Don't remind us that we've been waiting 10 long months for more "True Blood." / HBO

'Orange Is the New Black'

Netflix, returns June 6, midnight: Bit of a cliffhanger at the end of the first season! Presumably, everyone has kissed and made up in time for the second season of Netflix's heartbreaking and hilarious prison drama.

'True Blood'

HBO, returns June 15, 9 p.m.: The vampire/werewolf/fairy Southern gothic drama returns this June for a final season of love triangles and bad decision-making. There will probably be some new creatures and a series of hunky supernatural men with improbably hot gym bodies, because this show knows what you like.

Shows returning from 2001

'24: Live Another Day'

Fox, returns May 5, 8 p.m.
Yes, that "24." Anti-terrorism agent Jack Bauer returns for another horribly stressful 24 hours of his life. No word yet on the return of the cougar.

Returning shows you should be watching

'Call the Midwife'

PBS, returns March 30, 8 p.m.: Few shows spend as much time addressing issues of systemic poverty as this one. Also, almost every episode features a scene of childbirth in all its gross and painful glory. If that doesn't reel you in, the show is sweet, funny, well-acted and full of awesome period-specific costuming from the 1950s.

'Orphan Black'

BBC America, returns April 19, 9 p.m.: Without spoiling too much (there's still time for you to binge watch the first season on Amazon Prime before the premiere, so go do that now), this sci-fi drama has so far featured the same actress in seven different roles, and she's spectacular in all of them.

'Rectify'

Sundance, returns June 19, 9 p.m.: This Sundance original, about a man released from prison after his rape/murder sentence is vacated because of new DNA evidence, was called "revelatory TV" in a review by the L.A. Times and "a breathtaking work of immense beauty" by the Daily Beast. Watch it, then brag about watching it.

TATIANA MASLANY PLAYS SEVEN DIFFERENT ROLES IN "ORPHAN BLACK." / BBC AMERICA

Returning shows someone must be watching

'Drop Dead Diva'

Lifetime, returns March 23, 9 p.m.: A supermodel gets reincarnated as a plump lawyer to learn about inner beauty. Since this is the final season, let's hope she's figured it out by now.

"DROP DEAD DIVA" LIFETIME

'Under the Dome'

CBS, returns June 30, 10 p.m.: How many times have you heard a coworker ask, "Hey, did you see 'Dome' last night? Unbelievable!"? Never, right? Seriously, do people watch this show? Do people in the show ever walk into the dome wall? We need to know, but we just can't get over the hurdle of actually being interested enough to watch.

'Inside Amy Schumer'

Comedy Central, returns April 1 at 10:30 p.m.: Season 1 of comedian Amy Schumer's hybrid stand-up/sketch comedy show received mixed reviews, but the preview online for season 2 looks legit, with guests including Paul Giamatti, Janeane Garofalo, Rachel Dratch and Michael Ian Black.

Comedy

'Surviving Jack'

Fox, premieres March 27, 9:30 p.m.: Christopher Meloni will never top Gene, the proud sweater-fondler he played in "Wet Hot American Summer," but he's trying anyway with this sitcom about a stay-at-home dad. It's set in the '90s, because cellphones ruin all dramatic tension.

'Trip Tank'

Comedy Central, premieres April 2, 10:30 p.m.: Various comedians and animation styles combine for a sketch comedy cartoon that's likely to be obscene and offensive to some, quotable dinner conversation for others.

'Last Week Tonight with John Oliver'

HBO, premieres April 27, 11 p.m.: HBO dips its toe in the "Daily Show" pond by stealing a popular "Daily Show" correspondent.

"SURVIVING JACK" STARS CHRISTOPHER MELONI. / FOX

Let's do the twists

"Gang Related" premieres in May on Fox. / FOX

'Salem'

WGN America, premieres April 20, 9 p.m.: Sure, you thought the Salem story was about the effects of mass hysteria in a puritanical New England town, but what if there were ACTUAL WITCHES involved? Scary times ahead, and look out for some hot Cotton Mather action as well.

'Black Box'

ABC, premieres April 24, 10 p.m.: This is a medical mystery show about a neurologist ... who has mental health issues! Starring Kelly Reilly, of Caroline Bingley in the 2005 "Pride and Prejudice" movie fame (fine, she was also in the "Sherlock Holmes" movies), it sounds a bit "House"-ish.

'Gang Related'

Fox, premieres May 20, 9 p.m.: Ryan Lopez is a new member of his city's gang task force, but he's also ... a member of a gang! Will his loyalties be tested? Will there be good guys in the police ... but also in the gang? Signs point to yes.

Battle of the dramatic computer use shows

Hey, hey, the geeks are all here in "Silicon Valley." / ISABELLA VOSMIKOVA

'Silicon Valley'

HBO, premieres April 6, 10:30 p.m.: Remember when "30 Rock" faced off against "Studio 60 on the Sunset Strip" as shows about late night shows? This spring, the hot topic is the people who make your technology. "Silicon Valley" comes from Mike Judge, of "Office Space" and "Idiocracy" fame. Funny dudes are involved (see above) but the only woman appearing in the trailer is a stripper. Way to combat stereotypes about the tech world, guys.

'Halt and Catch Fire'

AMC, premieres June 1, 10 p.m.: Set in the '80s, "Halt" is about a team of people who try to out-IBM IBM in the PC race. AMC has a pretty solid track record — minus "The Killing" — and we all need more '80s music and clothing in our lives. This could be worth tuning in for '80s hair alone.

Prestige programming that everyone will talk about

'The Normal Heart'

HBO, premieres May 25 at 9 p.m.: This is HBO's adaptation of the play about the early days of the AIDS crisis, and the efforts of gay activists to raise awareness in an unforgiving world. Julia Roberts will deign to grace your TV set, and Ryan Murphy of "Glee" and "American Horror Story" directs.

Monsters, mayhem and revisionist history

'Turn'

AMC, premieres April 6, 9 p.m.: Based on an actual spy ring, "Turn" is about a farmer and his friends becoming spies during the Revolutionary War. Reportedly, the real spies used invisible ink and coded messages in newspapers (and probably other cereal box prizes, as well).

'Penny Dreadful'

Showtime, premieres May 11, 10 p.m.: If you like camp, Gothic horror and Victorian London, "Penny" is for you. Timothy Dalton headlines this psychological thriller about literary monsters (Dorian Gray, Dr. Frankenstein, Josh Hartnett) running amok in London.

'Extant'

CBS, premieres July 2, 9 p.m.: Another movie star heads to the greener pastures of TV. Halle Berry plays an astronaut trying to readjust to life on Earth after a yearlong solo mission in space. The promos say she ends up changing "the course of human history," so it's a pretty big year for Halle.

'The Strain'

FX, premieres some undetermined day in July: The head of the CDC in New York, who we feel obliged to inform you is named Ephraim Goodweather, works with his team to combat a virus that appears to be a form of vampirism. It's based on a series of books by Guillermo del Toro, so that's neat.

Like your Gothic horror with a side of camp? Then "Penny Dreadful" is your new favorite show. / SHOWTIME

'Klown'ing around with John Leguizamo

See more at www.metro.us

"Ghetto Klown" airs at 10 p.m. Saturday on HBO.
HBO, CRAIG BLANKENHORN

Laughs. The actor and comedian brings his latest one-man show to HBO.

Those who couldn't catch John Leguizamo's one-man career retrospective, "Ghetto Klown," when it was on Broadway and on tour now have another chance to see the rowdy, emotional performance: It's coming to HBO Saturday night.

After four stand-up specials for HBO, Leguizamo is comfortable baring all on stage (emotionally, that is). "You do develop a callus," he says. But Leguizamo wouldn't be able to be so vulnerable if he weren't in tune with himself — a practice that he credits his therapist in helping him with.

"You can't have a show like this and not go to therapy," says the actor/comedian, who is very open about the fact that he sees a therapist. "You have to be very self-aware and want to be self-aware to be able to write a show about yourself, and a good show."

Leguizamo says that there was no way he could present an honest account of his life without touching upon negative experiences ("The audience knows when you're fast-forwarding," he says). He believes that turning his tough times — like a shaky relationship with his dad and a divorce — into art help him reframe the narrative and move on from them.

"A lot of artists use art to take control of it," he says. "You recreate it lots of times until you can let it go. … I'm taking all my traumatic moments, making them funnier than they actually were, but reworking them and having control over them this time, as opposed to them controlling me. When you're making the art you're the god, and then you can see all the sides of it and it gives you distance. Then it's not so toxic."

"Ghetto Klown" took eight years to develop, and Leguizamo worked to ensure it ran "like a clock."

"I'm one person and I'm doing a lot of emotional things," he says. "I have to have certain things be right on time and right on schedule so that I can just be a springboard and fly, not thinking about anything." Being a method actor helps, he adds, because "it teaches you how to be crazy in front of a lot of people."

Leguizamo says the show is his "magnum opus" and that it's his last autobiographical performance. Up next, he'll be doing a political or historical production of vignettes, in a tribute to his hero, Jonathan Winters.

MEREDITH ENGEL
@MeredithAtMetro
meredith.engel@metro.us

Wild and crazy

Sometimes Leguizamo's theater audience took the show's party atmosphere to the next level.

- "I love the reactions from the audience and I think that's part of what feeds the show, but it's still a theater piece," he says. "For some reason, the owners felt like my show could tolerate people bringing the drinks to their chairs, in super-size cups, so there was a lot of inappropriate behavior going on." And we're talking more than phones going off. "I almost crashed head to head with this guy because he ran onstage."

Rated R

Leguizamo's wife, Justine, has seen "Ghetto Klown," but his two teenagers haven't — and won't until they've graduated college, he says.

- "They know it's inappropriate and they're not allowed," he says. "It's a lot of personal things that I'm not ready to share with them." By the time they're 21 though, "they'll have life experience," he says. "They'll understand a little bit."

Muppet movie

In the green zone

Rowlf accompanies Miss Piggy as she launches into another Celine Dion number. / DISNEY

"Muppets Most Wanted" begins with our heroes panicking over how to follow up their 2011 reboot, and mocking the very idea of sequels in song. A more subversive number would assert that sequels are a chance to ditch the pomp and burdensome introductions of a first film and just have fun. (Not that "The Muppets" was remotely tedious.)

Of course, "Muppets Most Wanted" doesn't have the benefit of earthquaking nostalgia, which the first both exploited and explored. It has to be judged on its own merits. And luckily it's a sprightly and terminally silly construction, certainly the oddest plotted of any of the Muppet movies. It finds Kermit and company preyed upon by Dominic Badguy (Ricky Gervais), who convinces them to rush into a European tour. In truth, he's a thief whose partner, Constantine, is a dead ringer for Kermit, save a sinister mole.

There's a token homily, but it doesn't come until the very end. It's mostly goofing around. This is a far loopier film than the first, with cameos both wearyingly token (Usher, Gaga) and bizarre (Frank Langella! Miranda Richardson!) Constantine gets the best song, in which he dons a leisure suit to croon about armadillos. (Actually, the best number goes to Ray Liotta and Danny Trejo singing Boyz II Men. This movie is weird.)

"Muppets Most Wanted" is "Help!" to the first one's "A Hard Day's Night" — a freewheeling block of inventive nonsense that will go undervalued. That said, it does tragically shortchange Rowlf and Gonzo. MATT PRIGGE

Loyal fans won't rebel

Book to movie. Don't worry — the "Divergent" movie hews pretty close to the novel.

Virtually anytime a movie based on a best-selling book comes out, waves of criticism follow about the differences between the two. But now that "Divergent" is (finally) in theaters, critical readers will be hard pressed to find inconsistencies.

The movie sticks extremely close to the book: The characters look like they should, post-apocalyptic Chicago is as bleak as described, and the sexual tension between Tris (Shailene Woodley) and Four (Theo James) is as thick as author Veronica Roth intended.

When we spoke with Maggie Q, who plays Tori, and Mekhi Phifer, who plays Dauntless leader Max, both actors told us that while Roth was on set most of the time, she kept her opinions to herself. "She's just so thrilled that all this is happening," said Maggie Q. "She's really smart and thoughtful about what we're doing with the film, but she was in no way looking over people's shoulders. She was just so open, which I think is really cool because when it's your material, sometimes you get too close to it."

Still, many actors did use Roth as a resource on set, asking specific questions about their characters' backstories and soliciting the author's insight. But while some actors took advantage of Roth's presence and the book, Phifer chose to study the script instead, in fear that the book would get in the way of how his character had been adapted for the film. "I want to read them [eventually], but I didn't want to be jaded," he told us.

In a past interview, Woodley mentioned that the book is 400 pages and the script is only 90 pages, so of course some things have to be left out. This presents itself primarily in some of the interrelationships between the characters, not the action or fighting. The romantic relationship between Christina (Zoe Kravitz) and Will (Ben Lloyd-Hughes) is boiled down to a fun flirtation. Al (Christian Madsen) also plays a much smaller part than in the book, not really forming any close friendships.

The attraction between Tris and Four builds almost as slowly onscreen as it does in the book. / SUMMIT ENTERTAINMENT

Still, the elements of the book that matter most are truly brought to life on the big screen. For fans of the series, the movie will be far from a letdown — it will be a sweet reward.

Von Trier. Let's talk about sex (and fly fishing)

Lars Von Trier is a funny guy. This might not always be apparent, given that he's tortured an almost blind Bjork ("Dancer in the Dark"), immolated the planet in a fiery apocalypse ("Melancholia") and had Charlotte Gainsbourg snip off a certain ladypart with rusty scissors ("Antichrist"). But even his most heinous onscreen acts are played with a sense of P.T. Barnum relish.

Indeed, "Nymphomaniac" is the warmest and funniest film he's ever made, even though it's about a sex addict (Gainsbourg again) recounting her shags with a revolving door of strangers, plus Shia LaBeouf.

Felicity Gilbert and Stacy Martin eye Shia LaBeouf in "Nymphomaniac: Volume I." / CHRISTIAN GEISNAES

Review

'Nymphomaniac: Volume I'

Director: Lars Von Trier

Stars: Charlotte Gainsbourg, Stellan Skarsgard

Rating: NR

Admittedly, "warm" only describes the first "volume" of "Nymphomaniac," which has been divided in two. ("Volume II" will be out April 4, while a second, even longer version with hardcore inserts, will come later.) It does start grim, with Gainsbourg's Joe lying, bloody, in a dirty alley. She's rescued by a recluse, Seligman (Stellan Skarsgard), who becomes her sounding board as she recounts tales of her youthful hyper-prurience (when she's played by Stacy Martin).

Actually, he's not a sounding board at all. A bookworm and virgin, he constantly interrupts her with digressions, semi-related stories, anything that doesn't have to do with sex. He talks about fly fishing. Later, he will talk about rugelach. (It's all germane — sort of.) Seligman essentially functions as living footnotes, annotating Joe's stories with all the brainy references that the less gutter-minded sect of "Nymphomaniac"'s audience will get. It's a running gag, and a hilarious one, that adds rich texture to a film that would perhaps be monotonous without it.

As for the boinking itself, it is — at least in this quasi-sanitized cut — nonjudgmental and refreshingly not miserable. In fact, it's not very sexy, even when the actors are grappling with prosthetics. But it's about more than sex. It's a big, open film, one that finds Von Trier prankish and, at times, disarmingly sincere. Its fragmented nature means it's not entirely traumatic when it suddenly stops.

Andrew Rannells takes the stage Friday night. / PROVIDED

Andrew Rannells lends his voice to the Pops

Theater. The actor shows off his chops this weekend at Carnegie Hall.

"The Book of Mormon" and "Girls" actor Andrew Rannells will be doing a concert at Carnegie Hall Friday, performing showtunes with Broadway veteran Stephanie J. Block. Steven Reineke, music director of The New York Pops, asked the two actors to choose the songs.

"That's kind of like a dream come true, for a singer just to say 'These are the songs I want to do,'" Rannells told us over coffee a couple weeks before the show.

Rannells had been friends with Block for years, he said, but this is the first time they'd had the opportunity to work together. The duo will perform songs — from shows like "Funny Girl," "Into the Woods," and "Wicked" — both together and individually. Surprisingly, there are no songs from "The Book of Mormon," which Rannells starred in on Broadway.

"I'm disappointed about that," he says. "I would've liked to, [but] the producers of 'Book of Mormon' didn't want me to sing anything from the show."

Something that's not disappointing to Rannells? The fact that he's been promoted to a series regular on "Girls." He'll start filming the fourth season in April with Lena Dunham and the rest of the cast.

"I'm so excited about this," he said, a big smile on his face. In fact, the actor is in the process of moving back to New York so he can focus on the show full-time. He moved to L.A. to do "The New Normal," which was canceled after one season.

On both TV shows Rannells has played gay characters, but that's not something he'd sought out.

"It's something that just happened," he said. "I've been asked a lot if I think that I've been pigeon-holed because I'm gay. I feel like I've been given the opportunity to play very different gay people. Just because they are gay doesn't mean it's all the same thing. I don't seek it out, but I do seek out jobs that sort of allow me to show different and well-rounded people in general, complex people, and if they happen to be gay, that's fine."

Is Naya Rivera morphing into a Kardashian?

When we talk about "Glee" star Naya Rivera's breasts, in detail, as we're about to do, let's agree on one thing: She's always been a surprisingly busty girl. Those sporty uniforms that she and Dianna Agron rocked for so long on "Glee" did a pretty good job of hiding the headlights, but if you look at red carpet photos, you can tell that Naya's curves were always there.

However, there are curves, and then there are curves. Rumors are spreading that Naya had recently gotten some surgical enhancement after she posted this beach pic on her Instagram, rocking some Kardashian-level proportions (to the evident delight of her fiance, Big Sean).

So did Naya get a breast enhancement? Not so, insists a source — it's just a case of a flattering camera angle and a very padded bikini top, according to E! Online. Which seems, well, not likely, but possible. Breasts are a mysterious thing. There's definitely padding going on there, but whether it's on the inside or outside is difficult to tell. Let's reserve judgment until "Glee" comes back and we can see those puppies in action. MELINDA TAUB

Cameron Diaz is not the most secure

Cameron Diaz sure is a Debbie Downer. "Everybody has been cheated on, everyone will be cheated on. I can't fix that, I don't know how," Diaz tells the British edition of OK! Magazine. [Editor's note: Please don't confuse The Diaz by telling her it is possible to not cheat on someone if you just decide not to cheat on someone.] Diaz is also fine not having kids, because that means she can travel. [Editor's note: Please don't confuse The Diaz by telling her it is possible to buy your child a plane ticket.]

Talking points

Lohan fires her sober living coach

Lindsay Lohan's vows to lead a cleaner life post-rehab are coming into question after she reportedly fired her sober living coach, Michael Cormier, once filming had been completed on her Oprah Winfrey-produced reality show, according to Radar Online. "Lindsay immediately hired Michael to be her sober living coach and companion. He moved from Los Angeles to New York City to be with her 24/7," a source says. "But as soon as the cameras were packed up, Lindsay gave Michael the pink slip, and he hasn't heard from her since." The cost of such a service might have been a factor for the often cash-strapped starlet: "This wasn't cheap for Lindsay, as Michael charges up to $1,500 a day," the source explains.

An egg-cellent charge for Bieber

Justin Bieber is set to get off easy with just a misdemeanor vandalism charge for the January egg-throwing incident, and the L.A. County Sheriff's Department detectives who investigated the matter are "absolutely furious" about it, according to Radar Online. "He caused $20,000 in damage and there is just no denying that," says a law enforcement source, who asked not to be identified. "It sends the wrong message to the community that celebrities are treated differently." But the L.A. District Attorney's Office disagreed, stating that "there just isn't enough compelling evidence to file a felony vandalism charge."

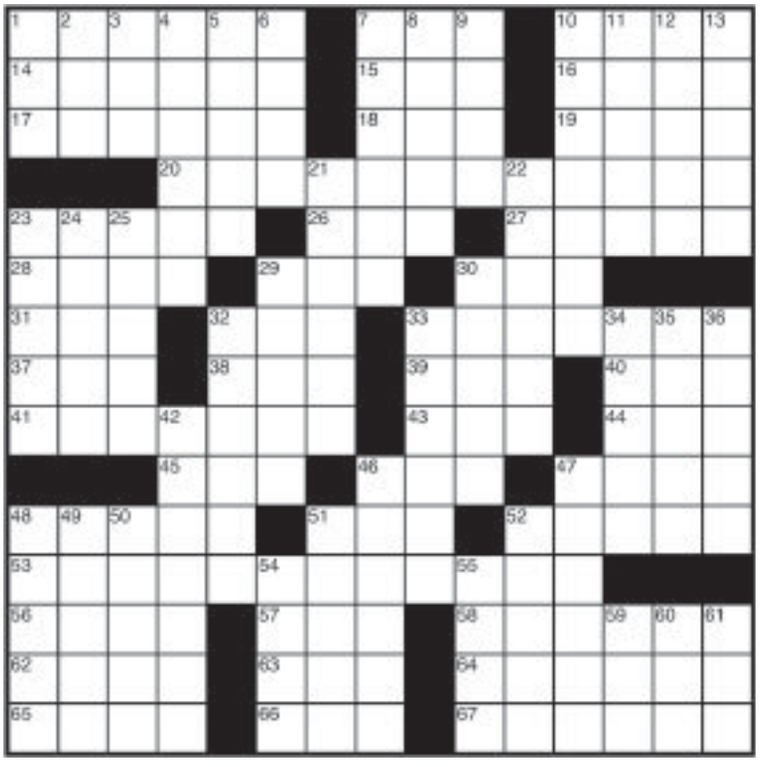
Thursday's answer



Letters

Be more like Truman, Obama

Following a question on the Keystone pipeline, Secretary John Kerry said that after gathering all the information, he would make a recommendation to the president. But one wonders why, after more than five years of exhaustive study, President Obama cannot make up his own mind by himself. It has become painfully obvious that he wants to delay as long as possible and then distance himself from whatever decision is finally made. Obama also needs to decide if we are to export natural gas to Europe to counter the Russian stranglehold. The decision must be made quickly if we are to influence events in Ukraine. I am convinced that [Russian President] Vladimir Putin would take notice if the pipeline were approved, and Obama would approve the export of natural gas and fast-track development of U.S. export facilities. Instead, Obama has endless useless conversations with Putin and promises incremental sanctions. Harry Truman was admired as a president who could rapidly make a firm decision and stick to it. Obama needs to be more like Truman.

Parise makes return to Jersey for first time

NHL. The former Devils captain spent all of last season in Minnesota, but hadn't returned until Thursday.

The Devils have struggled to replace Parise ever since he went to Minnesota. / GETTY IMAGES

Zach Parise did not expect the Devils to honor him, but as the one-time franchise cornerstone explained Thursday morning, it's not personal. It's just the Devils' way.

The game Thursday night was Parise's first against the Devils since leaving the franchise in 2012. Parise signed a 13-year, $98 million deal to play for his hometown Minnesota Wild.

Parise agreed to the deal weeks after captaining the Devils to the Stanley Cup Final against the Kings. The Devils lost the series in six games, but Parise called the run his "best memory, hockey-wise," of a tenure with the Devils that saw the left wing record 410 points in 502 games.

"Anytime you're on a team like that and you go to the [Final], it's special," Parise said. "You remember things like that. It's my last memory so it's the freshest. That was the most fun."

In the end, the lure of plying his trade in front of family and friends was the final determining factor for a player whose departure — and those of Ilya Kovalchuk and David Clarkson the following season — have left a gaping void that the Devils have yet to fill.

"You never want to see one of your own players go somewhere else," Parise said, when asked how he anticipated the fan reaction to him. "I understand that."

Legendary Devils goaltender Martin Brodeur wasn't as diplomatic before the game, saying the fans are "for sure" angry about letting Parise get away.

CROMARTIE PLAYED FOUR SEASONS IN NEW YORK. GETTY IMAGES

Cromartie signs with Cardinals

The Jets made it fairly clear they didn't intend to re-sign Antonio Cromartie when they released him two weeks ago.

It became official Thursday when Cromartie signed a one-year deal with Arizona.

Jets general manager John Idzik was asked about the Cromartie signing on a conference call Thursday and said the team was "going to monitor" Cromartie's search for a team. As it turned out, they didn't have to monitor him for long. METRO

Bad beginnings

Niese to start on DL

Mets starter Jon Niese will start the season on the disabled list as he deals with tightness in his left arm, according to ESPN. The Mets announced Niese received a cortisone shot this week. The news isn't all bad though, as they hope he'll start April 6.

SOME SPRING STATS DO MATTER

Baseball players use spring training to work on a new swing, stretch out their arms and soak up sunshine. On the surface, preseason stats mean nothing.

But buried deeper, we can find nuggets worth sinking our teeth into.

Speed demon

With an average draft position around 127, Reds outfielder Billy Hamilton is more mid-round value than true sleeper. But those with an eye on spring statistics will take him far closer to the fifth round than the 10th.

The 23-year-old Hamilton already has six walks and 10 hits in 33 plate appearances, squashing the concerns he won't be able to get on base enough to use his speed.

He's tied with the Dodgers' Dee Gordon for the most steals in spring training with nine.

Jimmy Rollins is one to avoid. GETTY IMAGES

Slow your Roll

Last year, Jimmy Rollins hit .252 with six homers, 39 RBIs and 22 steals. Yet some are absolutely convinced he still has something left in the tank. The Phillies aren't among those people, especially given recent rumors they want to trade him as soon as possible. Rollins is hitting .091 with one homer and one steal through 27 spring plate appearances. There's a lot more name than game in the 35-year-old Rollins. Avoid him.

Metro does not endorse the opinions of the author.

NBA pickups

Time to scour the waiver wire for these players:

- Jarrett Jack, G, Cavs — Kyrie Irving (biceps) could be done for the season, leaving Jack's usage high.
- Harrison Barnes, SF, Warriors — Andre Iguodala's knee woes mean the highly athletic Barnes is now a starter.
